WHAT A DELIGHTFUL TREAT AWAITS US with The Bach Choir, Bel Canto Children’s Chorus, and spoken word readers of all ages in our first LIVE performance of A Child’s Christmas in Bethlehem. In compiling the spoken word and interweaving the poems and stories with Greg Funfgeld’s beautiful choices of music, much of my inspiration came from my own childhood. My large extended family used to gather at Claydon House on Boxing Day (as the day after Christmas is known in England), and rehearse for our own version of the Festival of Nine Lessons and Carols, which we offered in Claydon Church. Adding poems and stories to the familiar Biblical readings was one of the features my uncle Ralph contributed. I learned how poetry as well as music can break open our hearts and give the mystery of Christmas such immediacy in our lives.
Dear Friends:

FROM THE CONDUCTOR

AS I WAS DRIVING to Heckewelder House, the home of The Bach Choir in the heart of Historic Bethlehem, I was thinking about what I would write in this newsletter column. I was thinking about the season we’ve just gotten underway and what I thought important to share with you. I was listening to Sirius XM and was struck by the announcer’s straining voice at the end of a rousing presentation of Haydn’s Cello Concerto. His voice was so straining like this “How did you get into this music we love so much? Was there a teacher, a mentor, a relative, an adult, or someone who introduced you?” He then invited his listeners to send an E-mail with an answer to that question.

As I’ve continued to enjoy the season brochure so artfully and lovingly created by Anne Schauer, Bridget George and Renee James, I was thinking of the same question. This season is filled with opportunities to introduce your children, grandchildren, nephews and nieces, children in your church and neighborhood – to invite them all – to the wonder and glory of this great music.

Our Christmas Concert – a live performance of A Child’s Christmas in Bethlehem. Children’s voices singing and reading, beautiful carols, poetry, the story of the Nativity told in a most captivating manner! Our Family Concert – a 100th anniversary encore of the Classical Kids Mr. Bach Comes to Call – an astonishing story of JSB showing up in the home of 12-year-old Elizabeth as she tries to master a piece of Bach’s music on her piano before her Mom will allow her to go out and play. Susan Hammond created this extraordinary encounter and gave it words and music (by Bach, of course)!. With her permission and enthusiastic collaboration, we added real characters, costumes, wigs and a delightful staging. This may be the ultimate introduction to J.S.B. and his singing boys and to music to cherish your whole life long! Our Spring Concert – the glories of the human voice with brass and percussion. Our Festival – with our brilliant guest, She-e Wu who plays Bach on the marimba with such artistry and virtuosity – you will love it! All this creative and energy alongside performances of Bach’s music as Bach wrote it – the immortal Mass in B Minor, Cantata 21, Cantata 106 (as Jim Gaines says, “all of Bach begins here,” with this incredible cantata), and so much more.

We continue to work hard at giving this music to children – eight Bach to School concerts a year, Bach at Noon, our Choral Scholars program, and now, The Bel Canto Children’s Chorus of The Bach Choir of Bethlehem! I urge you to join us – be a part of introducing your family, someone you love, even a total stranger, to the glory and wonder, joy and beauty of this great music. Invite them to become part of our incredible community of souls who share this music with such love and passion. Enrich someone’s life! Don’t miss the opportunity and the pleasure you will discover in sharing! Ever grateful,

Greg Funfgeld, Artistic Director and Conductor

When Mr. Bach Drops By

Our 2018-2019 Season will open with a piece that is fierce enough to get everyone out of bed. Morten Lauridsen is a National Medal of Arts honoree and justly-famous composer of a wide range of choral works. His is fiercely difficult music, but there is palpable excitement in The Choir to rise to the challenges of this latter-day masterpiece.

The program will conclude with another fusillade of brass, organ, percussion, and choral praise in the form of John Rutter’s Gloria. The composer, he of the many Carols for Choirs, is one of the most popularly-performed writers of choral music of our time. His Gloria is an early composition, written in 1974, and was his first commission for an American choir. The work is, in Rutter’s words, “Exalted, devotional, jubilant, by turns.” It will offer an electrifying conclusion to this compelling program.

We’re so excited to be offering this program at the beautiful and historic home of The Bach Choir in the heart of Historic Bethlehem! We hope you’ll join the celebration!

Mr. Bach – Welcome home to Bethlehem!

by Greg Funfgeld

WHAT AN AMAZING LOCAL AND GLOBAL CYCLE of creativity the creation of Mr. Bach Comes to Call has been – from Canadian author and musician Susan Hamilton’s Classical Kids CD Mr. Bach Comes to Call, to the music and stage version adapted and directed by Greg Funfgeld and Bill George of Touchstone Theater, to the film co-produced by The Bach Choir and Classical Kids and directed by Maria Erades of GreenTreks Network in 2006. The film was broadcast nationally on PBS in 2008 and is still being distributed internationally by The Children’s Group/Linux Entertainment.

Now we welcome Mr. Bach home to Bethlehem on the 10th anniversary of the international film release. Thanks to Linny and Beall Fowler, who helped make the film possible, there are copies of the film in the libraries of every school in the Lehigh Valley. We use the video as part of classroom preparation for our Bach School program, and teachers often comment on how much the students enjoy this tale of J.S. Bach time traveling to our 21st century world.

Mark McKenna will be back as the brilliant actor who plays Mr. Bach, and I as Write, Touchstone Theater is preparing to audition a whole new crop of kids for the roles of the 12-year-old Elizabeth, who is practicing Bach’s Minuet in G when Mr. Bach drops by.

Mr. Bach – Welcome home to Bethlehem! by Bridget George

Bach’s humanity. His love for music, and his compassion and kindness toward Elizabeth, came alive and seemed so real today. In that moment on stage there, I genuinely felt as though Bach had lived, worked, and composed music to bless my life. The spiritual moment reminded me of my experience with The Bach Choir in Leipzig – just after we finished the Mass in B Minor in the Thomaskirche.

– Tom Goeman, Bach Choir News 2005

has soprano singer a rapturously beautiful cantus firmus, with linear counterpoint beneath, which somehow reaches back to the early Baroque composer, Schütz, and forward to Romantic music composed by admirers of renaissance polyphony such as Brahms and Mendelssohn. Though this work was later orchestrated for strings, continuo, and two trumpets, we’ll be doing the version with the brass accompaniment.

In this issue, we’ll Spotlight two Choir members who share a Bel Canto connection, and an orchestra member, who also discovered his love for music as a child. As always, the very real power of music and the role it plays in their lives was part of every story.

JESSE GEHMAN, SOPRANO II, and Shanti Fowler-Puja have more in common than their Choir membership. Each found their way to The Bach Choir through The Bel Canto Children’s Choir and their Choral Scholar program (as an alum and as this season’s scholar)! Their love of music started early. Jesse told us she learned her home address “By making up a song!” She was always singing, so much so that her mother sought out voice lessons for her. When her elementary school music teacher indicated she was young for individual lessons, she suggested exploring Bel Canto, where Jesse sang from 4th through 12th grade. Jesse says, “I never stood still that long for anything! I’ve never been more focused!” Jesse also spent a year as a Bach Choir Choral Scholar, and knew she wanted to keep singing for the rest of her life, even as she pursued a career in the health field.

SHANTI FOWLER-PUJA, SOPRANO II, began violin lessons at age 7, then began playing piano at age 12. She also plays the harp and Appalachian dulcimer, and started taking voice lessons when she was around 12. She is in her fifth year with the Philadelphia Philharmonic, her fourth year with Bel Canto Children’s Choir, and like Jesse Gehman, was selected to be a Bach Choir Choral Scholar. Shanti has been enjoying this season with The Choir and says, “The rehearsals are fun but a lot hanner than Bel Canto! The singers jump into the music much faster. I like how much attention is paid to details like dynamics and markings; everyone faster. I like how much attention is paid to these things in The Bach Choir.”

When asked about being part of The Choir, Jesse shared that even though The Choir members come from all walks of life, each of them is enriched by the experience and dedicated to excellence. “Bach wrote with his whole heart. His passion comes through and touches everyone who hears his music.” As very busy young women, both Jesse and Shanti find time for the beautiful music they love. Jesse says, “No matter who you are, music enriches your life.

The Choir is happy to have helped nurture Jesse’s talent as a student and is delighted that Shanti has followed that same path through Bel Canto and as a Choral Scholar. Thank you to Jesse and Shanti for sharing your gifts with us!

PAUL MILLER, VIOLA & VIOLA D’AMORE: Bach Festival Orchestra member Paul Miller says he was “a menace” in dance class as a child, and his mother learned Suzuki violin from a program on television. Later in life, she told him, “I had never seen anything like it, Paul. We put the violin in your arms - you were just 375 years old - and you stood still!” Something about the violin fascinated him, and having taught boys as young as 5, he knows this is very unusual.

Paul’s formal education took place at Vasser College, the New England Conservatory, Harvard University and the Eastman School of Music. He earned a Ph.D. in Music Theory and a Master’s Degree in viola performance at Eastman. Paul studied with Karinthus Stockhausen for several years, and wrote his dissertation on his music, including his large-scale works with religious themes. He also studied with Thomas Gregory, an expert in viola d’amore, who themed him “the most beautiful instrument ever - made in 1772 in Naples and once owned by novelist Thomas Mann.”

Greg Furfeldt contacted Paul while he was at Eastman, and asked him to play the viola d’amore for the Saint John Passion. From the start, Paul has enjoyed playing in Bethlehem. “There’s a really good vibe in the ensembles. I enjoy hanging out with the orchestra; including Liz Feld and Lorettta O’Sullivan. And I love Bethlehem and the Lehigh Valley. I’m fascinated that the community has supported this music for over 150 years. It’s just astounding how many people have contributed time, money and talent. It’s exactly the kind of team I want to be part of.”

The Saint John Passion is easily Paul’s favorite piece by Bach. “I get to be up there for 15 minutes playing on this crazy, amazing instrument (viola d’amore) – the music has incredible drama in it. You feel – especially in part two – that things go downhill for Jesus and the walls start pressing in. But there’s also an unbelievable message of triumph. No matter how abstract Bach gets, a sense of drama allows his music to be more interesting than other.”

With this much passion for music, Paul finds himself staying involved even when he’s not performing or practicing. He is particularly interested in projects that help create music. “The violin is 500 years old but now it’s in the electronic and digital age. What you can build sonically with violin, software, and a few pedals would blow the mind of anyone 50 years ago.” When he’s out of the studio, he enjoys the great outdoors, and is an avid hiker. Join Paul as he and some friends open our 111th Bethlehem Bach Festival with a new “Bach Outdoors” program, playing original arrangements of some of Bach’s most beloved masterpieces.

ALICE ANNE MILLER, a great friend of The Bach Choir and sister of our dear board member Joan Miller Moran passed away on June 11, 2017. Joan has recently let us know that The Bach Choir will be receiving a very generous gift to name our annual July Bach at Noon Concert in Allentown in loving memory of Alice. The gift comes in part from the Century Fund, established by Donald P. Miller, Joan and Alice’s father, and in part from Joan herself. Alice was one of the original trustees of the Century Fund and a faithful lover of the music of Bach and The Bach Choir until the very end of her beautiful life. Although Alice suffered from Parkinson’s disease, her compassion, wisdom, humor, love of bold and joyful colors, and shining soul, never dimmed. She continued a life of service and philanthropy that spanned the globe. She also never missed a Bach Festival, always attending with her sister Joan, until the year before she died. She always expressed what a blessing the music was for her, her favorite chorus being the “Sanctus.”

It couldn’t be more fitting that one of our Bach at Noon concerts – an oasis of joy and peace just like Alice herself – be named in her honor. We are sure Alice is smiling down on Joan’s loving gesture. We also know how much Alice would have loved the most recent July Bach at Noon at St. John’s Lutheran Church. She have loved the most recent July 2017 events, which included: an Oasis of Joy in Memory of Alice Anne Miller; and a group of youth from Community Bike Works. A feature in the Morning Call captured the spirit of the “Biking to Bach” adventure:

“It’s a great experience for these kids to get exposure to music and the arts,” says Booher, one of the leaders on the ride. “They really seemed to love it even though it’s a strange setting for these inner-city kids to sit through for nearly an hour.”

One of the kids who really loved the experience was 14-year-old Nashira Brown, a Bike-Works student leader. “I really liked everything that went on, and how they introduced us. It was also really cool to be able to park our bikes right up front, right against the altar. the lady closest to the conductor could really sing, and I thought that I’d love to be in her position someday” says Nashira referring to soprano Rosa Lamoreaux. “and that 16-year old from Moscow was really great.”

Greg Funfgeld’s words that help us better understand its brilliance and spiritual depth. The music on this occasion was Bach’s Cantata No. 80 “A mighty fortress is our God” and a Bach Concerto with 16-year old pianist Kristina Moditch from Moscow. Groups that were part of the overflowing audience included K-12 teachers from across the country attending a Bach Institute at Moravian College; a group from the Phoebe home in Allentown; and a group of youth from Community Bike Works. A feature in the Morning Call captured the spirit of the “Biking to Bach” adventure:

Thank you & Bless you, Alice and Joan, for helping us continue this program that brings so much joy to so many.

AT FESTIVAL IN MAY, we had the pleasure of welcoming John Kootnz of Ridgewood, New Jersey, who was attending Festival for the first time. John firmly believes it is important to encourage appreciation of the arts, particularly great classical music, in young family members. To share his love of the music of Bach, John brought his three delightful young granddaughters to Festival. It was a treat to watch them enjoy this special experience and a very full day of Bach Choir concerts and events!

John attends Bach at Noon concerts regularly, often bringing his two sisters, Marylou and Kathryn. John and his sisters have become great ambassadors for The Bach Choir and we are thrilled to welcome their family to ours!

When my three granddaughters, the eldest of whom is nine, learned that we’d be going to Bethlehem to hear Bach, they took it in stride. They are accustomed to visiting unfamiliar places. But Bethlehem? Bach?

The decision had been made hastily and at the last minute. When I called them on the phone and I worried that my order was akin to an ultimatum that I’d be bringing the eight plagues. But Renee James, Bach Choir’s Marketing Director, could not have been more welcoming. You’d have thought I’d offered her flowers in May!

We arrived Friday and attended Saturday’s performance of The Nightingale at the Zoellner Arts Center. This would be their first Festival event, their first encounter with Bach, and, for the two youngest, their first real concert. Before the lights dimmed, they sat in their seats, chapping like birds at a fountain, fluttering, giggling, looking around at the large, almost cavernous space of Baker Hall. But when the Bel Canto Children’s Chorus took the stage and lights dimmed, they became like nesting hawks with eyes fixed on the performance. It was, indeed, a magical event.

Afterwards, we attended the luncheon, warmly greeted by Cheryl Dungan, who introduced us to our hosts. They could not have been more gracious. The girls felt right at home.

Saturday night found us at Zimmerman’s Coffee House. We had been thoughtfully placed close to the action in Peter Hall, next to the harpsichord, which, with its unfamiliar tones, fascinated the girls. When he sat to play it, Greg Funfgeld made a moment to turn and greet them. They left the event in very high spirits.

As our weekend ended, I asked the girls to rate what they had seen and done. Moravian Book Store? Thumbs up. Candy store in Easton? Two thumbs up. W&K Railroad in Kempton? Another two thumbs up. Bach Festival? Two thumbs suddenly were not enough. They lifted their noses along with their thumbs high into the air.

For me, Bach’s music is as close to transcendence as I ever expect to come in this life. This is why I wanted my granddaughters beside me. They accompanied me cheerfully. In so doing, they allowed me to experience these pieces not only with children but also through them, as I joined my own granddaughters in the simple, palpable joys of Bach. – John Kootnz

WITH ITS WORLDWIDE PRESENCE, our website is often the first introduction many people have to The Choir. Making that experience a pleasant and smooth one is critical to building our long-term relationships with patrons, the press and the organizations who support our work through contributions, underwriting and grants. This fall, we've redesigned BACH.org to give it a clean and sophisticated new look, with an entirely new “path” to discovering information about The Choir and our activities. You can now navigate the information we offer online more easily, and connect with The Choir in new ways, including embedded audio and video clips that were not available previously, and a user-friendly calendar function we hadn’t been able to offer on the previous version. Enjoy your next visit to the new BACH.org!
